

“Greed” : “Hurricane” Analogy

Hurricanes are held together by extremely low air pressure in the eye of the storm; lower 'eye' air pressure sustains more violent hurricanes. Hurricanes are held together better by 'less'.

Unquenchable personal greed is at the center of both historical and contemporary social cruelty & chaos. Humanity's worst self-inflicted injuries arise when people with wealth & power abandon their self restraint. When greedy people, sociopaths, & ultra-competitors all come out of the closet at the same time, they perform a tail chase around an ethical vacuum, & the suffering of outsiders rarely disrupts the feeding frenzy.

Being unaware that a dimension of experience exists is the most profound form of ignorance, but is excusable.

Failing to fix an identified major cause of a valued system's failure is living, breathing stupidity.

Link: <http://ftp.setterholm.com/WorldPeace/Greed&HurricaneAnalogy.pdf>

The PhilosophyWorks®
Lakeville, Minnesota, USA
Website: www.setterholm.com

© 2020 by Jeffrey M. Setterholm

This page may be reproduced,
in its entirety,
without permission.